One Hot Minute Record Release Party • Pen Pals

Red Hot Chili Peppers and its guitarists is rivaled in rock annals only by Spinal Tap and its drummers. In our complete guide to Pepper guitarists, you can see the long and winding road that led to Dave Navarro joining forces with Flea and the Peppers.

1983

The Red Hot Chili Peppers formed by singer Anthony Kiedis, bassist Flea (born Michael Balzary), and guitarist Hillel Slovak.

1984

Slovak quits band, and is replaced by Jack Sherman.
First record released.

1985

Sherman is tossed out when Slovak opts to return.
Freaky Styley released.

1987

Band releases Uplift Mofo Party Plan.

1988

The Abbey Road EP is released.

Hillel Slovak dies of a heroin overdose in June.

Duane McKnight takes over guitar duties in August.

Jane's Addiction (with guitarist with Dave Navarro) releases its major label debut, Nothing's Shocking.

At the end of the year, McKnight is replaced by John Frusciante.

1989

Frusciante provides the band with some of its best guitar work, most notably on Mother's Milk.

1991

The band releases Blood Sugar Sex Magik, its commercial "breakthrough."

Jane's Addiction lead singer Perry Farrell dissolves Jane's in late 1991.
Navarro and bassist Eric Avery form Deconstruction.

1993

While touring in support of Blood Sugar Sex Magik, Frusciante quits the band, allegedly due to the rigors of the road. He is immediately replaced by Arik Marshall, an L.A. guitar fixture who had played in a pickup band called Trullio Disgracias with Flea.
Marshall fills in for the remaining dates on the tour.

Before work even begins on the next record, Marshall is replaced by Jesse Tobias.

Nine years after the fact, Jack Sherman files suit against the band, claiming he was mistreated by them and not adequately compensated for his contributions.

By the end of 1993, Tobias is out, his stint in the band lasting about as long as Duane McKnight's. By September, the Peppers begin practicing with former Jane's Addiction guitarist Dave Navarro.

1994

Deconstruction releases its self-titled album.

Although Navarro's hiring is still considered an industry rumor, the band is scheduled to play Woodstock '94 and produce another album by year's end.

The band appears at Woodstock with Navarro and begins recording One Hot Minute in July.

John Frusciante releases an album of experimental guitar music on the American label in late 1994 called Niandra Lades And Usually Just A T-Shirt—11 of the tracks were simply listed as "Untitled".

1995

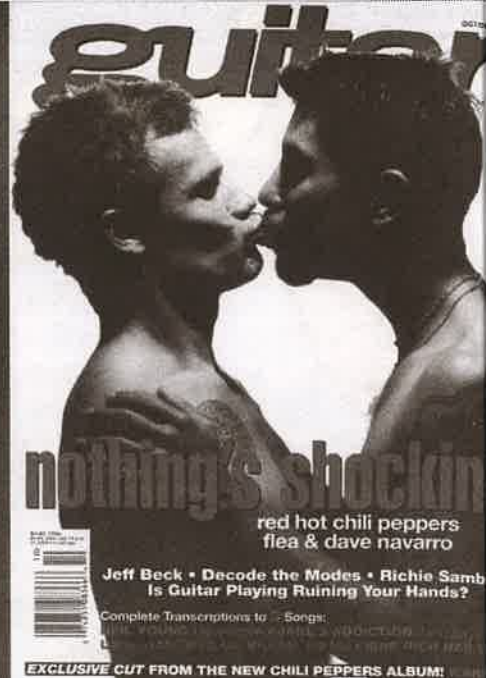

Numerous delays keep the Peppers from completing One Hot Minute; it is finally released in September 1995.

WHEN HE ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

Please, please, please use your membership number when you correspond with the fan club. It's the only way we can locate your file. If you want us to answer a personal question between issues (1.) use your membership number (2.) include a self addressed stamped envelope. If you do not live in the USA include an International Postal Coupon.

In issue #4 which was mailed in June and should have arrived at your home in July (unless you live in New Jersey, home of the black hole Newark bulk mailing center) we listed dates and locations for the October European tour. Three months later, in September, we started getting mail from members who "just found out" about the already sold shows and could we PLEASE get them tickets. No we couldn't; but that's why we had given you advance notice. This issue is late because we've been waiting for the finalized USA tour schedule—so you'll have a jump on everybody else. Pay attention.

Gavin Bowden who directed the 'Warped' video and also the 'Funky Monks' documentary about the making of 'Blood Sugar Sex Magik' has been working for the past two years on an even more comprehensive film about the making of 'One Hot Minute'. This one will also include concert footage from the tour and fictional action vignettes starring each of the lads. Flea as a touring motorcycle daredevil rider; with Clara. Chad the John Deere foot fetish hunter. Dave as a Mexican nightclub performer caught up in political intrigue. Anthony as a traveling evangelical country and western vegetarian preacher. More info and photos in next issue.

September 12 was RHCP day on MTV. They unveiled a new Rockumentary and an hour show called "At Home with the Chilis"; we may offer this combo as an underground video. We do have new videos: Merchandise (#60) the RHCP performance at 'Woodstock' with Dave. Also (#61) last year's 'Reading, England' show with Dave plus the bonus feature: a recent 30 minute interview with John Frusciante. New t-shirts (#12) the "One Hot Minute" piano girl picture (in black) sizes XL and M (which should work for most kids). New poster (#32) one of the K-Mart photo shoot pictures. We've finally found a RHCP biography we like, recommend and will offer for sale (#34) Red Hot Chili Peppers by Spike Harvey. It's from England in color and loaded with great pictures.

The band does "I Found Out" on the new John Lennon tribute album "Working Class Hero" (Hollywood/Disney) release date Oct. 10. Other contributors include Candlebox, Cheap Trick & Smashing Pumpkins, Sponge, George Clinton, Collective Soul, Toad the Wet Sprocket and Blues Traveler. We have Rolling Stone and Spin cover stories in October. We'll be performing on Saturday Night Live December 16.

It's membership renewal time for members number 355 thru 494 (Except for #478, 482, and 484). $12 USA. $15 all other countries.

EURO TOUR WINNERS: Tim Leufkens (#566) and Jolanda van de Meeberg (#399) plus one guest each won backstage passes for the Rotterdam, Holland show.

USA TOUR FREE TICKETS and BACKSTAGE PASSES!!!! The Forum in Los Angeles: Roger Castro (#602) plus one and Kristin Leach (#532) plus Autumn Silvio (#539). The Palace of Auburn Hills (Detroit): Cindy Oszust (#176) plus one and Mike Shimmin (#297) plus one. Madison Square Garden in New York City: Katie DeRogatis (#46) plus one and Isaac Klein (#198) plus one. All winners chosen at random from a pool of members living in reasonable proximity to those three cities.

Warner Bros. Record Release Party

Invitation Artwork by Flea's daughter Clara

Dear Friends —

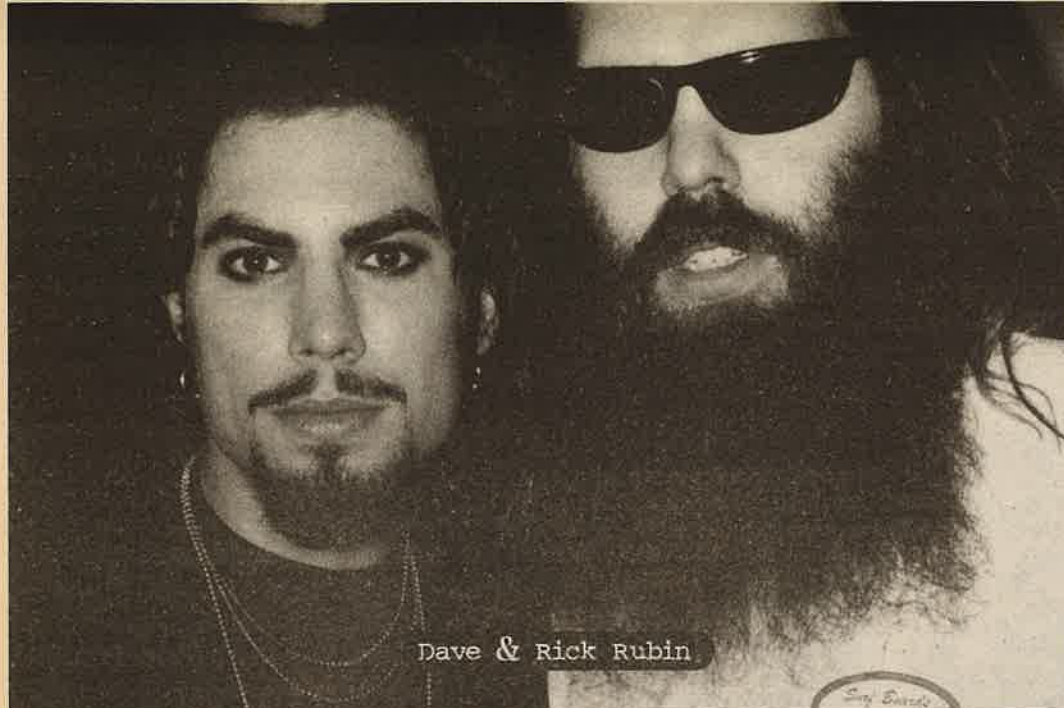

Tonight is the night of our big record release party in Hollywood. It feels really good to know we are all done and soon y'all can enjoy the fruits of our labor. This record is full of a kaleidoscope of honest emotions and I am very proud of it.

My 2 cats both had four kittens each and Me + Clara have named 2 of them Palm tree and doorknob. I love my cats.

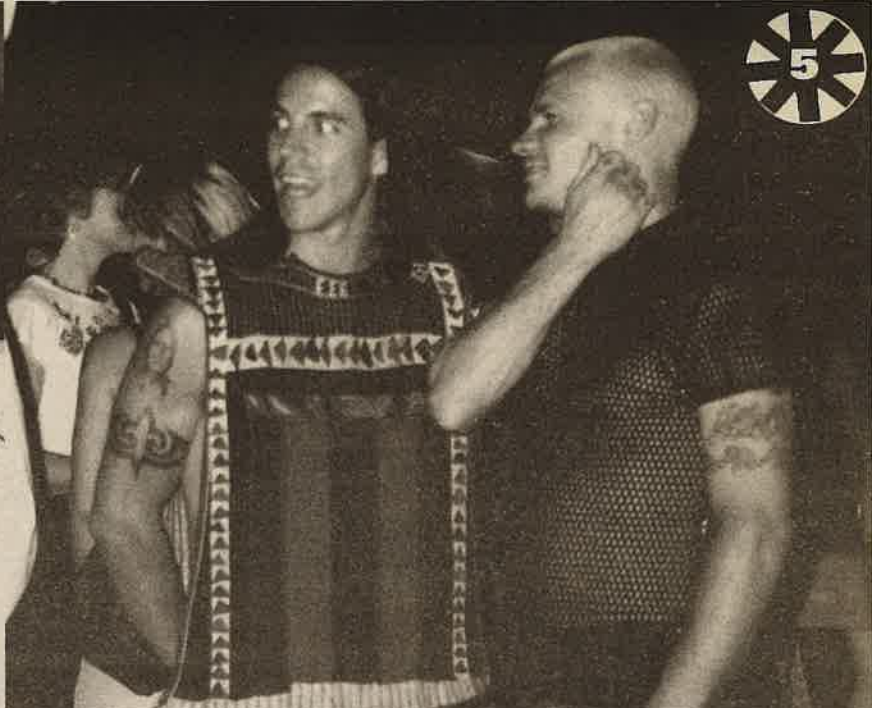

Soon we the RxHxLxp will be in your town rocking for all we're worth. I hope to see you then. . . . I got two new tattoos, one that says LOVE on the fingers of my left hand and one that says LOVE on the fingers of my right hand.

EXCLUSIVE CUT FROM THE NEW CHILI PEPPERS ALBUM! WARPED

Except for Hendrix, there's little common ground among their influences. Navarro cites English modern-rock guitarists like Daniel Ash (Bauhaus, Love & Rockets) and Robert Smith (The Cure). "It wasn't until I started listening to guys like that that I knew one note held for 12 measures could be an amazing thing if it was done in the right context," he says. "I always liked bands that were guitar heavy but still interesting. I never got into AC/DC because it wasn't experimental enough. I've always liked Hendrix and Page—guys that made all kinds of sounds as opposed to just shredding all the time."

Flea has a more eclectic, roots-oriented taste that takes in reggae, funk, and hardcore punk. "My two favorite electric bass records are What's Going On by Marvin Gaye with James Jamerson and Double Nickels On The Dime by The Minutemen with Mike Watt."

It took some time, but Navarro and Flea eventually came up with a way of working together that allowed them to create music they were both satisfied with and that didn't dilute their respective strengths. "When I first hooked up with them, I tried to play more along the lines of what I thought they wanted me to play like," remembers Navarro. "It was a little bit more forced but I think it came from the pressure that I put upon myself. In the end, I took a couple of steps toward what these guys naturally do and I think they took a couple of steps toward me. That's how we were able to come up with sounds that have not appeared on either past Peppers records or records that I have been involved in."

"We have a whole new sound," adds Flea. "Me and Dave sit together and one of us will have a riff for a song and we'll think up a bridge for it or a change for it and start developing it into an entire composition. It's new because he'll do something that's not like anything I would have thought of and it's not like anything that any guitar player I've ever played with would have thought of."

Whether it was down to Navarro's musical direction or just having some new blood in the band, there's no denying that the Red Hot Chili Peppers have produced a record that may be closest to what they've been striving toward for years: a dynamic mix of shifting tempos, volumes, textures, and emotions. "There's hard, slamming shit alongside beautiful ballads," explains Flea. "We've always aimed for that but I think we succeeded more this time. It's one thing to be able to jam and play the most cosmic things but it's another to be able to take the feelings that you have from those experiences and channel them into the format of a rock song that people can hum."

There are many such memorable songs on the new record. "Transcending," a song written for actor River Phoenix, has a slinky, circular groove that sucks the listener into a whirlpool of emotion. "Warped" is a jamming song that goes through a series of different dynamics and feel changes. Yet, somehow the band manages to stay on the good side of self-indulgence. "We just try to write the songs until they are done," says Flea. "That's the difference between someone who's a good musician and someone who's not. It's about taste and esthetics, and to me it's about love."

VOTED MUSIC MAGAZINE OF THE YEAR

Excerpts from Select

THE RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS ARE A BAND WITH an incredible history, but more remarkable still is their lifelong sense of spirit. Thirteen years, six albums, an almost indecipherable family tree; drugs, death, sex, cocks and rock; personal adversity, and a grossly overdue follow-up to their massive 'Blood Sugar Sex Magik' LP. And here they are today, in a swimming pool, frolicking, cackling and performing back flips like over-excited Summer Camp kids. They are, undisputably one of the biggest, funkier rock bands in the world. And they no longer have anything to prove.

Anthony Kiedis was born in Michigan in 1962. Eleven years later he moved to Hollywood to live with a virtual stranger, his father Blackie Dammett. A reasonably successful small-time actor, Dammett was an inspiration. He led a life full of wild parties, young women, rock 'n' roll stars, exclusive clubs, drinking and drugs, pleasures which, he generously extended to his son. With dangerous effects, as Kiedis now admits, "I was doing just about every imaginable narcotic by the time I was 13 - including heroin."

One year later, at 14, Kiedis lost his virginity to a beautiful 18-year-old girl, who was also openly sleeping with his father. At school, his debauched exploits were infamous and, on the whole, envied. He even had Sonny Bono, a friend of his father's, for a surrogate dad. Whenever Blackie was broke, Bono would take the young boy on day trips or weekends away. Around the same time, Anthony, trading under the name Cole Dammett, won a role in a film. He played Sylvester Stallone's son in the badly-received union-rights movie F.I.S.T. He showed no desire to act again. Instead he became uncontrollable, the wildest kid in school, fighting, taking drugs and driving a car with no brakes.

"I had this real need to prove myself as this incredibly aggressive, anti-authority-type little bastard."

"You sound like the kind of character I would have hated," Dave wails. "Which is interesting, because I love you so much now."

Anthony looks offended: "Well, I took it upon myself to help the retarded kids that were integrated in my school. I would land on you with a shovel in your face if you picked on them. But the goody-two-shoe jocks? I was forever playing hardcore, practical-violent humour towards them."

Dave and Anthony are now practically

"I was never violent, but I hated jocks," says Dave. "When I was in grammar school, my teachers nicknamed me Uncle David because I was the guy all my classmates would come to if they had a problem."

Anthony: "You would have hated me? No, you would have liked me. When I was ten, I pierced my ear. They thought I needed electro-shock therapy, because I came to school with this big ring in my ear. In 1972, in the Mid-West, that was like OK, this kid needs a rubber room and a straightjacket."

"HAVE YOU SEEN THE K-MART PICTURES YET?"

When a band have been together for as long as the Chili Peppers, the prospect of yet another photo session is hugely unappealing. But they're not a band short on ideas - they chose K-Mart to take their latest session. K-Mart specialises in photos of loving-couple, happy-family, bouncing-baby dimensions - a smear of Vaseline, a pale-blue curtain, a few 'cheeses' and you're done.

In view of the special occasion, Flea decided he'd wear a suit, and drove into town on his motorbike to buy one. On the way, however, he spotted something better. Parking his bike outside, he ran into the shop, purchased the outfit and, realising it would save time, put it on. It was something of a rare vision. A fearsome-looking skinhead, covered in tattoos and piercings, on the back an enormous Harley Davidson, wearing a full-length red-taffeta Mexican wedding dress.

The Red Hot Chili Peppers are not averse to a laffs - they are, after all, one of the few bands able to maintain their musical sincerity while dressed up as enormous silver lightbulbs.

Pepper promo pic purgatory: (top to bottom) the renowned nouveau genital garmenty gambit, circa '87; freaky-stylee/classical-art-backdrop interface in 1985; token can't-get-of-bed slacker interlude; ostensibly amusing trouser outburst... with guitars! oh, don't start now - yet more high-tensile sartorial sit-commery; finally, we move on to the old gumming-plus-elephant chestnut.

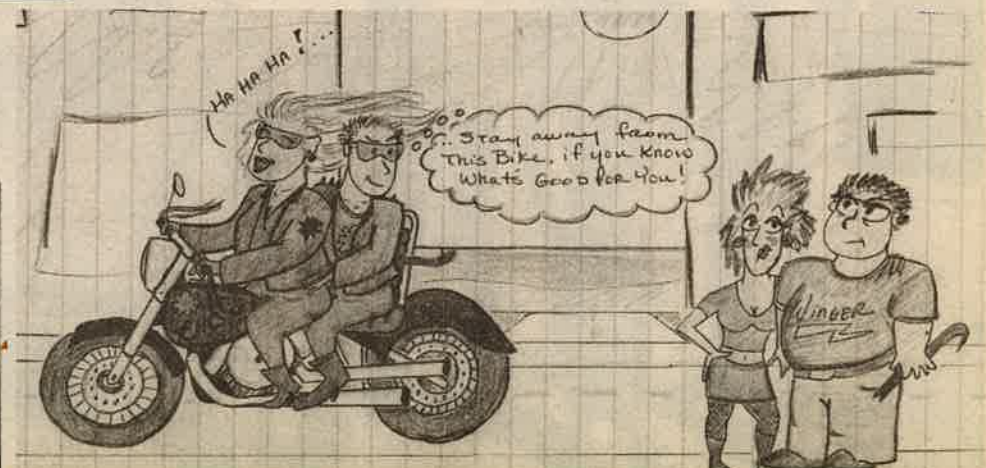

P.S.
Who is "Tearjerker" about? (Dave?)

Dear fans of the 'Magical Masters of Mystery', write to me cause my mail box is in need of something to munch on. NEW MUSICAL EXPRESS

In a league of our own

REWIND: 1991. The Chili Peppers have signed to Warner Brothers and are recording in a converted Hollywood Hills house with bearded genius Rick Rubin. The resulting album, the six-million selling 'BloodSugarSexMagik', propels them into rock's league of superstars and they spend the final day of 1991 playing with Nirvana and Pearl Jam in San Francisco in front of 14,000 fans. A two-and-a-half year world tour follows, including a joint headline slot on 1992's $18 million-grossing Lollapalooza.

The Chilis receive awards from MTV and Rolling Stone. They play a Grammy Awards slot, Glastonbury in 1993, Reading in '94 and add formidable former Jane's Addiction guitarist Dave Navarro to their line-up. On the surface, all seems remarkably well.

But the success of 'BloodSugarSexMagik' takes its toll. The intensive touring and promotion leaves them exhausted, and smack addiction precipitates the physical and mental decline of Kiedis and Flea. Their guitarist of nine-years-standing, John Frusciante, quits during a head-spinning Japanese tour and the band employs at least four replacements before eventually settling on Navarro.

LAST YEAR the Chilis took a break. They flew down to Hawaii, hired a group of houses and escaped the seedy sprawl of LA. They spent two months on an island; scuba diving, jumping off cliffs into the ocean, getting into fights, riding bikes for 300 miles and walking up volcanoes. When they dived, they stayed under the ocean for hours at a time and swam with pods of dolphins.

"They were just some pretty heavy bonding things and they go way beyond the connotations of thrill-seeking," remembers Navarro.

Kiedis also went on a separate trek to Alaska.

"I need to be in the wilderness and there's a big part of me that's just a straight-up nature boy that likes to be a part of the mountains and the rivers and the oceans and the skies and away from the city. It kind of gives you a perspective on what it is to be alive. All of the mundane stresses and rigours of life suddenly disappear and you realise that you are just this human spirit trying to evolve."

The idea of the Chili Peppers as explorers and nature boys hardly fits their cartoon caricature image. For years, they have created their own image as riotous loons whose sole passions are sex, body-building, funk and drugs.

ROLL FORWARD to 1995.

The Red Hot Chili Peppers have made a morbid and revealing new album, 'One Hot Minute', which graphically reflects the paranoia and chronic f—ups that plagued them between '91 and '95. So 'My Friends' is an 'Under The Bridge'-style ballad about the problems and deaths of Kiedis' friends, 'Warped' is a song about drug denial, 'Aeroplane' inclines that pleasure is always spiked with pain and 'Transcending' is Flea's tribute to his friend River Phoenix. He wrote it after travelling with Phoenix in the ambulance that carried him away from his fatal drugged-up night at LA's Viper Room.

European journalists reviewing 'One Hot Minute' describe it as "mature", a description which makes Kiedis flinch.

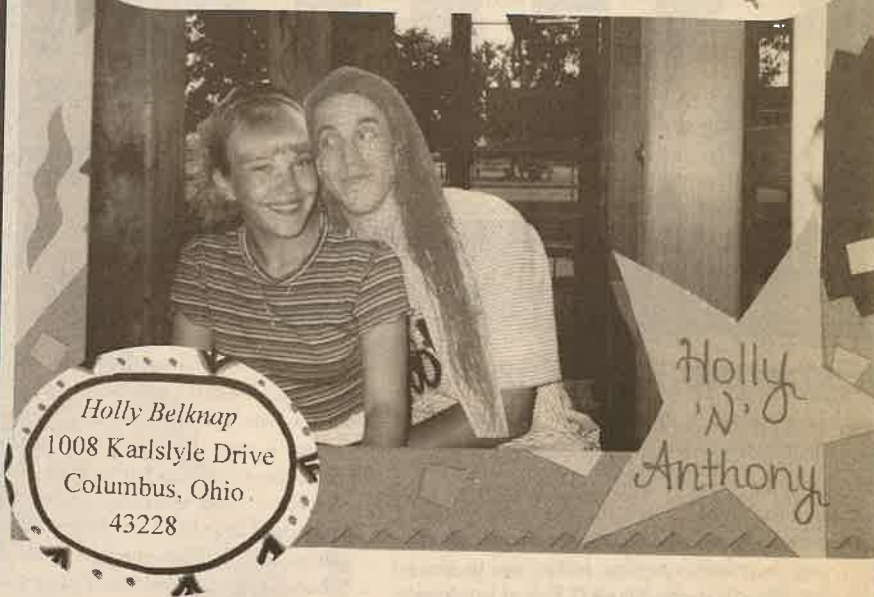

Drummer Chad Smith says: "Out of all of the people in the band, I'm probably more on the even-keel tip than the others. But it's frustrating for me to see the friends that I care and love go through terrible things. Flea was feeling... He just had a helpless feeling, it's a drag. Same with Anthony. Personally, I didn't go through those things but I feel what they feel. It's hard to see your friends go through it."

Hello Peppers-

Well, we've begun our European Tour - I'm in England right now, however,
I'm looking forward to winning to your tour - slowly,
I'm in the process of going out the window - It seems, that this tour, although exciting & important, is destroying my relationship at home -

I en perfekt verden vill Red Hot Chili Peppers v verdens beste band. Og Anthony Kiedis helsemir i vår langfria feilfrie verd det første mer nærliggende det andre. Alle artister av en storrelse går en eller annen gjennom en metamorfose, r slett fordi de kreativt s aldri er de samme fra til mål. Red Hot Chili Peppers har hålt sin, fordi to særdeles utadvend kunstnerisk nær perle plater. One Hot Minute del to, og ikke bare forsetter den der Blood Sugar Sex Magik slapp. Den tar av som i fase to av en rakettoppskyting, og er ikke en Challenger. Snarere en Apollo 9...

One Hot Minute er nærmere psykedelisk poppunk enn Peppers engang så originale thrash-funk. Det kan nesten virke som om de fire har hatt som mål å avvike begrepet. Med tanke på alle etterfigningene som har kommet i kjølvannet, er ikke den tanken uspiselig. Best kommer dette til uttrykk på åpningskuttet (og den første singelen) «Warped». En herlig syre-pastisj som går Beatles' «Tomorrow Never Knows» i nærheten uten å trække på noens tær. Flea er, som på hele albumet, i en jovial bassform, og deler ut gullkoi ved enhver korsvei, der hvor Dave Navarro har satt seg f skulle briljere med sin tilbake lente gitar, som i gitarbrette nevnte «Warped». Tempoet allerede bestemt, og ser seg den tilbake.

Anthony Kiedis synger n artikulert enn for, uten at no skal beskyld ham for å ove drive fraseringene. Han er fr satt den slømmeste gutten i sen når det gjelder å vræle, stemmebåndene hans syne
